

SEVEN ESSENTIAL LIFE SKILLS

Skill Building Book Tips

You can read Whoever You Are in a way that highlights Perspective Taking, a Life Skill that promotes Executive Functions. This Life Skill goes far beyond empathy. It involves figuring out what others think and feel and forms the basis for children’s understanding of the intentions of their parents, teachers and friends. Children who can take the perspectives of others are also much less likely to get involved in conflicts.

TIP: :

You can ask children questions about the ways the people in the book differ from their own experience. For example, you can say:

- “What are their clothes like? How are they different from the clothes you wear?”
- “What are their homes like? How are they different from your home?”
- “What else do you see that is different?”

SKILL:

Perspective Taking is being able to understand what others think and feel. By talking about the differences your child sees in the book, you are helping your child learn about Perspective Taking because he or she is learning about the perspectives and experiences of others. This back and forth conversation you have about this book is what researchers call “Take-Turns Talk.” Like a game of ball, one of you says or does something and the other responds. The importance of these everyday interactions to brain building is a key finding from child development research.

TIP:

You can point out the people in the book that might look differently or live differently, but draw attention to how we are all alike. For example, you can say:

- “He cries. I cry. You cry. We all cry sometimes.”
- “Even if we look and live differently from others, we all laugh.”

SKILL:

When you talk about the ways that the children in the book are just like your child, you are helping him or her form a basis of understanding the deeper similarities among people. By helping your child gain these understandings, you are promoting Perspective Taking and your child’s Executive Function skills.
