

SEVEN ESSENTIAL LIFE SKILLS

Skill Building Book Tips

You can read Horton Hears A Who in a way that highlights Taking on Challenges, a Life Skill that promotes Executive Functions. Life is full of stresses and challenges. Children who are willing to take on challenges (instead of avoiding them or simply coping with them) do better in school and in life.

TIP:

Ask your child:

- “How does Horton feel when no one believes that there are small persons on a speck of dust? How does he cope with his feelings?”

SKILL:

Taking on Challenges elicits many different emotions and presents opportunities for children to learn to manage them.

TIP:

Ask your child:

- “What does Horton do to try to save Who-ville? How does he deal with the taunting and actions of others who endanger Who-ville; the exhausting journey in following the black-bottomed bird that ‘tattered his toenails and battered his bones,’ the search in the patch of clovers ‘a hundred miles wide,’ and his own capture? What keeps him going?”

Ask your child what would keep him or her going if your child was in Horton’s place.

SKILL:

Taking on Challenges involves finding ways to deal with challenging situations.

TIP:

Ask children if they find the refrain in this book (“A person’s a person, no matter how small”) inspiring. Can they think of another time when “special words” helped them or others respond to challenge? What were those words?

SKILL:

Having a goal is important to Taking on Challenges. Executive Function skills are driven by goals. You can talk with your child about how important it is to Horton to save Who-ville.

TIP:

Ask children how they feel about the different characters in the book and what they learned from them.

Horton Hears a Who!

By Dr. Seuss

Horton the elephant may be large, but he cares deeply about those who are not—even organisms that are too small to see. In this Dr. Seuss classic, Horton struggles to protect his tiny friends from harm. After all, “a person’s a person, no matter how small.”

SEVEN ESSENTIAL LIFE SKILLS

Skill Building Book Tips

SKILL:

Children learn about Taking on Challenges through role models. This story can serve as a role model: Horton is a role model. So is the Mayor. And so is the smallest person in Who-ville, Jo-Jo, who is first described as a shirker, but comes through in the end. You are a role model, too. You can share a story about something that was challenging to you and the strategies you used to deal with it.

TIP:

You can ask your child:

- “What did Horton do when the bird said he would fail?”
- “What did Horton do when he was caged?”

SKILL:

Taking on Challenges requires what has been called a growth mindset by researchers. This means that we believe we can continue to learn and can tackle difficult situations. This can be promoted by praising children’s effort and strategies, not their personalities.

Pointing out specific actions helps children see that believing in yourself can be a source of strength in Taking on Challenges.

Horton Hears a Who!

By Dr. Seuss

Horton the elephant may be large, but he cares deeply about those who are not—even organisms that are too small to see. In this Dr. Seuss classic, Horton struggles to protect his tiny friends from harm. After all, “a person’s a person, no matter how small.”

These tips sheets were developed by Mind in the Making, in collaboration with First Book. Mind in the Making and Vroom are programs of the Bezos Family Foundation. Find more books and materials on the First Book Marketplace, a resource available exclusively to educators and programs serving children in need. Visit: www.fbmarketplace.org.

